

Minimal Economic Perspectives (From Soviet Union to the Present):
By Shomit Sirohi

I. 1950 - 1990 - Soviet Union and Economics

I would judge that Soviet Union was known for agrarian economics and even large freedoms of the peasants which introduced innovations for the peasant class and was responsible for major economic gains. Then came the city and cultural policy which was innovative as well. In economics though, the crisis of public sectors was also perennial, some type of self-management Yugoslavia then was practiced - a lot of public sector crises and a lot of innovations something like capitalist crisis and its innovations. This is from 1950 - 1990, a story of Soviet Union - imagine a man being called on the phone and taught architecture and producing a Budapest hotel with a lot of Brechtian acting and deconstruction, with Hegel and Lacan all of this then was East European architecture - I think though my bet is Soviet Union is a major event in history - for its dynamic crisis and static development and even its politics and jokes and all of this meant in fine analysis - as the joke goes - where is my friend's home? All the crises became about hierarchy or key which means when will the comrade let me into his house? A number of such jokes means it is also a bureaucratic society of hierarchy which means with reciprocity, the party form and debates create the syntax of not democratic materialism and its opinions, and liberal debates and elections or classical or neo-classical economics or neo-liberalism or for that matter a people's vote for far rights, or such praxis, which then of course becomes the 1990s and 2000s more especially - a perfect recipe for Soviet Union misunderstood and failing in public opinion itself within Yugoslavia - oh those oppressors.

II. 2020 - 25 - Ritournellos on Soviet Union, Israel and World Bank and EU

As of course the 2000 - 2020 debate was all about rape news, and such debates, even crises of far rights and cartels and even fake news being wired on far right victories and even BJP with Bolsenaro becoming dominant and long margin victories, the completely outmoded Communism is now back with its Sirohianism - a mix of deconstruction, jokes in Quranic format, with a lot of acting and theatre, and even films and film footage and imperfect cinema all in a juicy pop cultural sandwich called youth spirit and feminist sex and psychoanalysis and of course the long wait for economics and debates on eccentric Holderlin loving philosophy, the crisis is now an EU crisis with of course no room for utopia and just another public sector crisis as history is about crisis which then is periodised by Sirohi, who thinks it is a positive crisis.
